Extols Career of Great Liberator In Men Present - Escort of Former Wearers of Blue and Gray For Mr. Roosevelt-Exercises Under Auspices of the Lincoln Farm Association.

Hodgenville, Ky., Feb. 12.-At Amer-Ica's Berhlehem, near this town, where her savior was born 100 years ago, the should show in doing our work today. nation paid tribute today to the memery of Abraham Lincoln. Eloquent speakers extelled his fame, and on the spot where stands the cabin in which he first saw the light the cornerstone of the Lincoln memorial was laid. The principal figure at the laying of the corneratone was Prasident Rocsevelt, who delivered the main address.

The services at the Lincoln farm were held under the suspices of the Linceln Farm association, which has labored long and assidnously in the offort, now crowned with success, to mark worthfly the scene of Lincoln's birth. The association was representand by its president, former Governor

There it served as a spring house until the early eighties, when it was bought by an enterprising showman and carted around the country to serve as an attraction at world's fairs and elsewhere. From this ignominious fate it was rescued by Mr. Collier. The putgrowth of his efforts to preserve it as a perpetual memorial for the nation was the Lincoln Farm association, whose labors will take concrete form in the marble memorial which will be built around and over the shack in which Lincoln was born.

Acting as escort for President Roosewelt and lending a very picturesque touch to the occasion were the members of the Louisville post of the Grand Army of the Republic and the members of the Louisville camp of the United Confederate Veterans. The mingling of the blue and the gray on this occasion elicited from President Parest and loftlest spirits is vouch-Roosevelt many expressions of delight.

The Men Who Spoke,

The exercises at the Lincoln farm was delivered by ex-Governor Foik, who spoke on "The Lincoln Farm Association." He was followed by Governor Willson, whose theme was "Lincoln's Mother State." Then came Pres-Ident Roosevelt, whose "Lincoln Centennial Address" was received with earnest attention and at its close with great applause. The president's successor as orntor was Secretary Wright, who spoke for "The Confederate Veteran." Last on the list of speakers was General James Grant Wilson, the well known writer and orator, who spoke for "The Federal Veteran." The laying of the cornerstone followed the ad-

President Roosevelt spoke as follows: We have met here to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the birth of one of the two greatest Americans; of one of the two or three greatest men of the nineteenth century; of one of the greatest men in the world's history. measure fortunate in the characters of the two greatest of our public men, Washington and Lincoln. They were allke in essentials—they were allke in the great qualities which rendered each able to render service to his nation and to all mankind such as no other man of his generation could or did render. There have been other men as great and other men as good, but in Speach at Laying of Corneratone of all the history of mankind there are the Lincoln Momorial-Distinguished no other two great men as good as these, no other two good men as great, Widely though the problems of today differ from the problems set for solulion to Washington when he founded this nation, to Liucoln when he saved it and freed the slave, yet the qualities they showed in meeting these prob-

Lincoln's Qualities Needed Now. We of this day must try to solve many social and industrial problems requiring to an especial degree the combination of indomitable resolution with cool headed sanity. We can profit by the way in which Lincoln used both these traits as he strove for reform. We can learn much of value from the very attacks which following that course brought upon his head, attacks and by the extremists of reaction. He lived in days that were great and terrible, when brother fought against brother for what each sincerely deemed to be the right, in a contest so grim the strong men who alone can carry it through are rarely able to do justice to the deep convictions of those with whom they grapple in mortal strife. Preferred the Insomnia.

A story is told of the late hishon of London, Dr. Creighton, and Lord Rosebery. Lord Rosebery complained to the bishop of want of sleep, to which the bishop replied that he never suffered from insomnia, The earl observed that he wished he knew the remedy. The bishop's formula was very simple. If he felt drowsy he started to write a sermon and in a ew moments he was wide awake. On the other hand if he wanted to sleep
